What happened to hungry America?

America seemed hungrier back in the sixties than today. My family did whatever they could to survive. My grandpa ran a country grocery store. My dad drove two hours to work in an underground coal mine. We raised a garden and had livestock. One uncle drove to a northern city to paint during the week. Another uncle raised strawberries and drove a school bus. Another uncle was a peddler salesman driving over several counties. Nobody was rich but everybody was very busy trying to take care of their families. This was all back before food stamps and other current government programs became popular. There is no question that people in our area of Appalachia had struggles but people had a hunger and a desire to survive.

I watched the movie Coal Miner's Daughter long before I went to Van Lear to see Loretta Lynn's old home place. Sure enough it's up a "holler." However, in many ways it's a beautiful place. Her brother, who at that time, was battling cancer and still running a country grocery store gave my wife and I a tour of the old home place. When touring that old house I knew there was something within Loretta Lynn and her now deceased husband Oliver "Mooney" Lynn that was greater than the conditions of poverty that engulfed the area. The innate desire to live and rise above their surroundings lifted them higher than they probably ever imagined. They first moved to Washington State to work before Loretta started having success with music that took them to Nashville. Of course, we all can't sing like Loretta Lynn. However, we can all do and be something. Much of America has lost its desire to rise above life's circumstances. We have become mired in our joblessness, poverty or stuck in a situation.

A lot of America has died. We are breathing and going through the motions. We are collecting our food stamps, government assistance and in too many cases numbing ourselves on prescription drugs. Hopelessness is widespread from Butcher Holler to every mega city house and condo throughout the United States. Sadly many suburban houses are filled with depressed, drug sedated Americans who cannot find the internal wherewithal to get up and get moving. More Americans now die from painkillers than from heroin and cocaine combined, (Mark Koba, USA Today, July 28, 2013).

I'm sure the people who lived where I was raised, on Milo road in Kentucky, had days when the dark cloud of hopelessness almost killed their spirits but I doubt it happened a lot. People were too tired. They found something to do with their minds and bodies. We didn't have computers, cell phones and social media. We had yards to mow, gardens to tend and were trying to figure out how to make a few dollars. We didn't need drugs to numb ourselves. We simply fell into bed exhausted.

An America that's not hungry for a better life and is reliant on the government and the politicians to care for us and solve all of our problems will live sadly and die tragically.

A very taxing time of year

Well, income tax day is almost here and once again my wife has sworn not to let me near our income tax forms next year5. In the past, the members of the Internal Revenue Service have requested much the same.

stor-news

Back in the 1990s they suggested that theiur computers were not up to dealing with my mathematical ability. Personally, I thought that was a compliment to my calculator-like mind until my wife pointed to the note at the bottom of the letter they had sent us stating. "Most people realize that 3 plus 4 equals 7 not 63."

In my own defense on that one, it was an easy mistake to make ... I think ... It had something to do with the numbers 3 and 4, a pair of numbers which have never been good numbers for me.

I admit it. I am not good with numbers. For the longest time, I thought my wife had 87 cats around our house. It turns out there are only three. But I think a couple of them have been bringing dates around the house to, "meet the family," so I can probably be excused for that one too. After all, as I pointed out to my wife, all cats look alike. She did counter with the comment that all three of hers are different colors.

I remember that I thought there were 87 cats because I tried to take them off my income tax as deductions a couple of years back; first as about me too) but the IRS said no ter off as a necessary business expense. My contention was that since I had mentioned them twice in my column, I should be able to deduct them (after all I am a journalist). They responded that I have also mentioned the Eiffel Tower, George W. Bush's cattle and the hunt for Osama Ben Ladan in my column, and using my logic, I should be able to write all of them off my income tax as a business expense, too. I said I thought was a good idea. They said no.

I think part of the problem comes down to the fact that so much of the stuff deals with letters and numbers and as I have said before, I have something of a blind spot in those areas. I mean there's the 1040 A, 1040-B, 1040-EZ, 1040-EZA, there are W-4 forms, and W-2 forms and WD-40.

I realize that most people don't link WD-40 with those other letter/number combinations around this time of year, but it is for me, especially this year. I was working on a neighbor children. (My wife always says they are very kid's bicycle at the same time I was working on columnist for the Star-News unless auditors child-like - but then again, she often says that our income tax and spilled the oil on the forms. for the IRS decide otherwise.

On the positive side, the bicycle seems to be confusion when I called in an order to replace the spilled oil (I requested a spare can of WD-40 as a replacement and the sent me 40 cans of hair replacement oil), I think I might be able to write the cans off as either a business loss or a medical expense.

That's another thing about the IRS, they are really picky about what they allow for medical expenses. Both my bar bill and my liquor store bill were disallowed when I listed them as "nerve treatments".

The government has much the same reaction regarding my religious donations. Neither my season tickets for Denver Bronco games nor my fishing retreats on Labor Day, July 4, and Memorial Day at area lakes were allowed as deduction in that.

My wife contends the whole problem with the IRS stems from my economic therory that as long as there are checks in the checkbook, I will be able to cover my bills. She keeps saying. "Just because you have checks, doesn't mean you necessarily have money in the account."

I sure hope the IRS doesn't take the same point of view when I write checks to them.

How does one become a fan?

How do you go about choosing a team to be a fan of?

For some it is proximity thing. If you grow up near a team, you're going to be more likely to be a fan of that team. Absent any other forces, if you grow up in Colorado and are a football fan, you're more likely to be a Bronco fan than a Jacksonville Jaguars devotee. As a reporter who these days also has to be a sports reporter, I pretty much always have to root for the home team.

For some it is a family thing. If you grow up in a household with fans of a particular team, you're likely to follow suit.

For some it's a hate thing. I recall the saying in Colorado every Sunday was "root for the Broncos and whomever is playing the Raiders." Having a team to dislike gives you some options for teams to like.

For some it is a personal connection. Obviously, many people remain fans of their college's teams long after they went there.

For some it is a favorite player. My brother is a big fan of a football player named Danny Woodhead. They went to the same college, albeit not at the same time. So my brother, in addition to the other teams he likes, will root for any team that Danny Woodhead is playing for.

When I started watching Formula 1 I decided to find a team or a driver to be a fan of, and it wasn't necessarily an easy process. I had very little predisposition toward anyone in particular. There is no one with any proximity, as there are currently no American teams or drivers. There aren't any other fans in my family (that I know of) so I haven't inherited any favorites. I don't hate any of the teams, so no rivals to root for. I didn't have any previous personal connection to it either.

So I kinda had to look at each of the individual drivers and decide who I liked and who I was going to root for.

It was an evolving process as I watched last year's season evolve. At first I latched onto Kimi Raikkonen, the former Lotus driver from Finland. He's a funny character, sometimes monosyllabic, sometimes surly, but always entertaining. He's also a former world champion, and if you're picking a favorite, it doesn't hurt to go for someone who has done well in the past. But last year he ran into problems, even after winning the first race. He started having trouble with his back and sat out the final two races.

Strangely enough while this was going on it was his teammate Romain Grosjean, a quiet Frenchman, who caught my attention. The less-experienced Grosjean kept crashing in every race at the beginning of the year, but turned it around and started driving with more confidence and finesse, getting second-place finishes as the season wound down.

I'll also admit that I was drawn to Lotus because their black and gold color scheme is one of the coolest looking of all the F1 teams. I suspect you Cowboys and Cowgirls fans will be with me on that one.

The other driver that kept me glued to the screen last year was Nico Hulkenberg. While driving for Sauber, the German consistently put together great races against people in faster cars, holding off world champions and finishing well into the top ten.

I do like making unconventional choices, and these guys seemed to fit the bill, rather than going for the obvious favorites like Sebastian Vettel or Lewis Hamilton.

I've carried these choices through to this season, and so far it's been a mixed bag. Grosjean and Lotus have had a horrible time. They're behind the curve in almost everything. The fact that they finished both cars in last weekend's Bahrain Grand Prix is seen as a victory. Unfortunately, even this victory was marred when their other driver Pastor Maldonado crashed into another car and flipped it end over end. Maldonado was given a penalty during the race and has to start five places down from wherever he qualifies in the next race.

Lotus will need to fight for every inch if they're going to be a factor this year - and if they're going to survive for next year. But I would be a pretty bad fan if I abandoned them when the chips are down, so I'm hanging in there

My other team, Force India, had an impressive weekend. Hulkenberg put in a great drive and ended up in fifth place despite starting far down the grid. Their other driver Sergio Perez, who had an abysmal 2013 at McLaren, justified his hiring at Force India with a third place finish. This, apparently, is only the second podium finish in the team's history.

Force India seems to be where Lotus was last year: the underdog nipping at the heels of the front-runners. That's all right though, cause everyone likes an underdog.

And at long last my NCAA March Madness bracket is as lost as everyone else's. There was a brief moment where I allowed myself to think I might win. But I had Michigan State and Louisville in the championship, and they were both eliminated. Better luck next year.

If you have a 2014 Graduate in the family and would like to honor them, call Jessica or Angela today for more information. Our office number is (785) 899-2338.

Cowboys split doubleheader with Burlington

In their first games of the season, to make it 2-0. the Goodland High School baseball team split a doubleheader at Burlington on Saturday.

The Cowboys had been scheduled to play Wray at home March 31, but the game was called off due to high winds and blowing dust. That game has been rescheduled to Monday. Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mindbending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!
