Statistics on physical child abuse staggering

The statistics on physical child abuse are alarming. It is estimated hundreds of thousands of children are physically abused each year by a parent or close relative.

Thousands die. For those who survive, the emotional trauma remains long after the external bruises have healed.

Communities and the courts recognize that these emotional "hidden bruises" can be treated. Early recognition and treatment is important to minimize the long-term effect of physical abuse.

Children who have been abused may display:

- A poor self image.
- Sexual acting out.

- Inability to trust or love others.
- Aggressive, disruptive, and sometimes illegal behavior.
- Anger and rage.
- Self destructive or self abusive behavior, including suicidal thoughts.
- Passive or withdrawn behavior.
- Fear of entering into new relationships or activities.

intimate personal relationships. These men and women may have trouble with physical closeness, touching, intimacy and trust as adults.

They are also at higher risk for anxiety, depression, substance abuse, medical illness and problems at school or work. Without proper treatment, physically abused children can be damaged for life.

Early identification and treatment is important to minimize the long-term consequences of abuse. Child and adolescent psychiatrists provide comprehensive evaluation and care for children who have been abused.

The family can be helped to learn new ways of support and communication with one another. Through treatment, the abused child begins to regain a sense of self-confidence and trust.

Physical abuse is not the only kind of child abuse. Many children are victims of neglect, sexual abuse or emotional abuse. In all kinds of child abuse, the child and the family can benefit from the comprehensive evaluation and care of a child and adolescent psychiatrist.

search aspects of the proposal and support it.

One suggestion was to produce a video showing the current solid waste system at work and another showing how the baling system works so people can compare the two.

Committee members agreed to help research the project and to provide an update at the next meeting on Wednesday, Feb. 18.

In other business, the committee heard from Gary Mosbarger, who protested being charged for solid waste removal he neither needs nor uses.

He said his property is within city limits and zoned commercial. Under the county's contract with In the Can, he is being charged $20.40 a month for trash removal.

The committee decided the problem is in the definition of a commercial property, and unanimously voted to recommend changes to the city's trash ordinance that would specify that only commercial storage facilities must be charged mandatory trash removal fees.

The committee recommended that private storage facilities owned by customers who live in the city and have an established utility account would be exempt from these fees.

The next meeting will be at 5:15 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 18, in the conference room on the first floor of the county courthouse.
