Kids enjoy the games

The Flatlander Fall Festival drew children for the games, contests and painting on Saturday. (Clockwise from the top) Erin Coash took McKenzie for a walk around the ring at the Scruffy Dog Contest. McKenzie won the prize for the most talented dog after Coash coaxed her to roll over, shake hands and bark. At the Carnegie Arts Center, Chloe Goodwin, 9, added the finishing touches to a sun painted on the community canvas, a cooperative painting project set up all day. Daron Hovis working with the computer graphics section of the Northwest Kansas Technical College, painted a pink Chevrolet symbol on Tabby Pope's arm. The jumping balloon was a popular spot for the under-10 crowd, with kids enjoying the bouncing fun all afternoon. Although too young to sign up, 2-year-old Jacob DeLaRosa joined in the fun, tossing a football at the Punt, Pass and Kick contest at Cowboy Stadium set up by the Goodland Activities Center.
