'People's Choice' photos named at arts center

Forty photographs were displayed and more than 100 votes cast during the month-long community photography show. LPL Financial Services, owned by Kyle Gordon, sponsored the show.

"This is a great opportunity for amateur and more advanced photographers to display their work in our gallery," said Tina Goodwin, Carnegie Arts Center director. "We hope to display this exhibit again next year and encourage all local photographers to start preparing photos to enter."

Anybody who has not picked up his or her photo is asked to please do so any time during regular gallery hours.
