

City bought pumping power for waterworks plant

By Evelyn Ward
Sherman County Historical Society
June 23, 1905: City Buys Pumping Power — The council meeting was very important. The principal business was the settling on a gasoline engine and pump attachment that would meet the requirements for the waterworks plant.

Four bids were heard and considered. H.S. Maloney of Beatrice, Neb., was awarded the contract for both engines and a pump head. The Dempster, the engine selected, is a double cylinder, 16-horsepower machine, and the pump head, or attachment, will be constructed by the Dempster company especially for the wells here and will give a 30-inch stroke at about a

today in history

maximum of 35 strokes to the minute. The two outfits, f.o.b. at Beatrice is $1,676. The contract calls for the installing of the machinery in place at the waterworks here, a thorough test as to efficiency and a guarantee by the company for a year. A dynamo will be installed for electric sparking in operating the engines. The plant selected was not the cheapest as to price, but, in the judgment of the council, more nearly met the requirements here than some of the others offered, as the Dempster company makes a specialty of pumps and deep-well pumping.

The council deserves a great deal of credit for its painstaking investigation of the waterworks details and strict economic business methods of procedure.
June 24, 1905: New Kind of Grain — W.E. Smith of Grant township brought in Saturday a stalk of a new cereal. It resembles barley but grows larger with longer heads and beards. Mr. Smith calls it “corn-wheat.” He secured 35 grains at the world’s fair in the Idaho agriculture exhibit. The head has very long grains resembling wheat.
June 25, 1905: Goodland Wants Flouring Mill — Goodland really presents an attractive field for the erection and operation of a modern flouring mill. Sherman County is fast growing into wheat raising, and the agricultural successes achieved here are astonishing. The wheat crop this year is exceptional, yet there is not a year that thousands of bushels of this cereal of good quality are not produced in Sherman County. A rare opportunity is awaiting the enterprising mill man, right here in Goodland.

June 26, 1905: Rainfall Record — About two weeks ago, this paper printed a government record of the rainfall for a number of years in Wallace County. It was the indication that if Wallace received a certain amount of moisture, Sherman County got equally as much. It was not known that any complete record had been kept by anyone living in Sherman County, but

J.B. Moore can generally come to the rescue, and here bobs up with a water record for March, 1905 of 2 7/8 inches; April, 1905, 4 7/8 inches; May, 1905, 2 2/8 inches; and so far in June, 1905, 3 1/8 inches. Total, 13 1/8 inches. Mr. Moore said that the rainfall in some other parts of the county, Goodland for instance, had received more moisture than had his neighborhood in McPherson Township, which would aggregate, he thinks, fully as much as were given in the table for Wallace County. “The above is the tail end of 19 years of such record I’ve kept in Sherman County, Kansas,” said Mr. Moore.
June 27, 1905: Lawn Ridge News (Southern Cheyenne County) — What has become of the Russian thistle, about which so much anxiety was felt by the farmers a few years ago? They were made to believe that when the Russian thistle got a good start, there was no use to try to farm. But the thistle is already a minus quantity. Have they dried out, drowned out, or has the industrious farmers killed them off?

June 28, 1905: School Census, District No. 1 — The completed taking of enumeration of the school population found 370 persons between the ages of 5 and 21 years. The state’s semi-annual disbursements amount to about $1 per person of school age. From weekly issues of The Goodland News, provided by the Sherman County Historical Society. Since the paper was published weekly, some items were arbitrarily assigned a date.

Hoarding things can interfere with life

Most people have a lot of “stuff,” including collections of specific objects and accumulated family heirlooms and mementos.

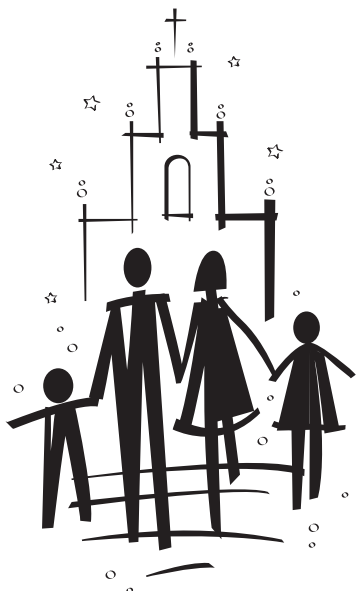

high plains mental health

- plain sense

Some people keep such items stored and well-ordered, while others have a difficult time remembering where it all ended up. But some people go far beyond saving and collecting to what is called “problem hoarding,” the excessive collection and retention of things, including animals, until it interferes with day-to-day functions. Hoarding behaviors begin at an early age but usually are not seen as a problem until later in life. Hoarding problems have become increasingly apparent in the elderly, particularly when declining health results in caregivers being more involved in the home. Extreme cases include serious self-neglect, piles of rubbish in the living environment and living in general squalor. These seniors usually live alone, frequently deny their condition and often refuse help. Their situation comes to the attention of others when friends or neighbors report their concerns to health officials or law enforcement. Problem hoarding is increasing nationally, particularly in the elderly. It has become a public health issue and a mental health issue. Problem hoarding can cause safety and health hazards. It has serious consequences in terms of personal and financial costs, quality of life, community health risks and deterioration in physical, emotional and social well-being. It is a behavior that at this time is not well-understood and that requires the help of professional organizers, mental health treatment and the involvement and support of other caregivers for improvement to occur.
