Name for baby could cause family rif

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I expect our first child in about a month. We know it will be a girl, and we are now in the process of selecting a name for her.

I love a certain unusual name, "Dallas," and my husband likes it, too. It also works well with our last name. The problem is, my husband's sister, "Rita," has apparently husband and I really want to name claimed the name and forbids us to our little girl Dallas, but we're wor-use it. Rita was almost named Dallas herself because that's where she was conceived. In truth, my husband and I are considering the name because of the story about his sister. Abby, Rita isn't pregnant, married, or actively trying to have a baby. For all we know, she may never have one, let alone a girl. My ried about hurting Rita.

Is it wrong to "steal" the name, and is Rita justified in telling us not to use it? - MOMMY-TO-BE IN MARYLAND

DEAR MOMMY-TO-BE: I shouldn't have to tell you that stealing is wrong, and you already know it will create hard feelings.

Unless you're prepared for the possible confusion of having two first cousins with the same name, I'd advise against giving your baby a name that has so much emotional significance to your husband's sister. How about naming her "Houston"?

DEAR ABBY: I haven't spoken to my middle sister, "Julia," since Christmas because we had a disagreement and she physically assaulted me.

She tried to put my eye out with her fingers and push me down some stairs. She did it in front of my children as well as my niece. I know my sister needs help for her anger issues. How can I make Julia recognize that at 42 years of age, physically assaulting those who do not agree with her is not an option?

My siblings and I have endured years of abuse because if someone doesn't agree with her, Julia feels she has the right to strike out. She's abusive to everyone. She has even had physical altercations with my parents.

cause of what she did to me. How can I get her to realize she's in desperate need of counseling? In her book, she is never wrong and everyone is against her. — BEWIL-DERED SIS IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR BEWILDERED: Your sister appears to have serious mental problems that have gone untreated because your family has tolerated her bizarre behavior. When Julia began assaulting family members, the police should have been called and charges pressed. Stop covering for her. The next time it happens — and it will — press charges. A judge can order a mental nature would be appreciated, I'm evaluation if she is a danger to oth-

> DEAR ABBY: Should a mother write thank-you notes on behalf of a child, and if so, for how long? My daughter has her first birthday coming up, and I'm curious about proper etiquette in this situation. - NEW MOM IN KANSAS

> DEAR NEW MOM: Because your child is too young to write, you should write a thank-you note on her behalf. However, when she is old enough to have learned to print and spell, she should begin writing them herself. They don't have to be fancy, but "Thank you for ..." and her sigsure.
