Band students spend week at camp

Three Goodland band students recently spent a week at the 58th annual High Plains Band Camp in Hays.

Renea Reasoner, a Goodland High School sophomore, and Tyler cussion ensembles. He is the son of Jones and Andrew Shores, both Grant Junior High seventh graders, were at the camp July 10-16, at Fort Hays State University. About 200 high school and junior high musicians attended.

Students auditioned for placement in one of the three bands. Each student attended two daily band rehearsals, ensemble rehearsals, sectional rehearsals, mini classes and recreational activities.

Evening events featured concerts by staff members and a student talent show. The results of the weeklong rehearsals were enjoyed at the concert by jazz ensembles on Friday and the other ensemble concerts and band concerts on Saturday.

Reasoner played oboe in the Sildouble-reed ensemble and sang in the Senior High Choir. She is the daughter of Mark and Mary Reasoner.

Jones played percussion in the Blue Band and learned to play some basic trap set styles in his mini course and worked on the tympani. He participated in junior high per-Travis Jones.

Shores played euphonium in the Blue Band and learned some basic electric bass guitar techniques in his mini course. He also played in the junior high brass ensemble. The director of the Blue Band recognized him at the concert as the student who had come the farthest in the week of band rehearsals. He is the son of Nancy Shores.

Two instructors with local ties were on the camp teaching staff. Tremon Kizer, former Goodland band teacher, taught the Blue Jazz Ensemble and assisted students in sectional work. He will be the band instructor at Coffeyville Junior College this coming year.

Brad Shores, a 1979 Goodland ver Band and participated in the High School graduate, taught a mini course on the art of playing steel drums. He is the head director of bands in Haven.
