Mother gets surprise bear for daughter

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago, I lost a treasured stuffed animal from my childhood. I told my husband about it, and how sad it made me.

Being the caring, thoughtful person he is, he went on eBay to see if he could find one like it. He thought he had located it, but wanted to be absolutely sure, so he sent my mom the link. She informed him it wasn't the same bear and convinced him not to buy it, but still he told me about it. The next time we went to visit my mother, she said she had a "surprise' for me. As we were packing to go home, she presented the surprise: The same teddy bear my husband had shown her. He was very upset, but did not confront her.

My husband has also mentioned that he feels my mother doesn't like him. Would it be OK to ask her why she bought the bear after talking him out of it? If so, how would you suggest mentioning it without sounding accusatory? -- UPSETINCOLUM-BUS, OHIO

DEAR UPSET: Stop worrying about sounding accusatory, and just ask her why she did it. Maybe she wanted to be a "hero." Maybe she felt the need to upstage your husband. Whatever the reason, she should explain herself. She owes your husband an apology.

DEAR ABBY: I am 10 and go to an elementary school where there is zero tolerance for bullying, teasing, fighting, etc. I have extremely low vision and have to wear glasses, but nobody made fun of me. (I'm the only one in class who wears glasses.) A friend of my mom's son is starting first grade this coming year. His vision is lower than mine, and he has to wear very thick glasses. They are so thick the other kids might consider him a "nerd."

How can I comfort him? He is already sad. Do you think the kids will make fun of him? — KID WITH GLASSES IN MISSOURI

DEAR KID WITH GLASSES: Support your friend by making a point of "being there" for him if he needs to talk, and if he's feeling bad about himself, reassure him by reminding him of his good points. However, because your school has

each other, the boy may not encounter the problems you fear he will.

One way to ensure tolerance and understanding would be for the teacher to prepare her students by explaining to them the disability their classmate is dealing with. When I was in grammar school, a deaf girl joined my class. Once her condition was understood by the other students, she was readily accepted.

DEAR ABBY: My neighbor, who has been divorced for about a year and a half, has a day job. Her ex-husband is unemployed and lives just down the street. While my neighbor zero tolerance for students abusing is at work and her two teenage sons are away, her ex goes into her house, sometimes for an hour or more. (He has access to their children's house keys.) At certain times of the month, I see him digging through her trash can at the end of the driveway.

I am sure she has no idea of what is going on at her house while she is at work. Knowing his bad behavior in the past, should I let my neighbor know what her ex-husband is doing? DILEMMA IN NORTHEAST

DEAR DILEMMA: I am reminded of the profound saying, "All that is necessary for evil to happen is for good men to remain silent." What are you waiting for? Speak up!
