DEARABBY: My beloved husband passed away in early October, leaving a hobby cabinet filled with expensive items. Ithad neverbeen kept locked. The keyswerealwayslefthanginginthelock. The day before the visitation at the funeral home, my son quietly locked the cabinet, pocketed the keys and took them with him. The next day, my husband's brother told me what my son had done and expressed concern about his intentions regarding the contents of the cabinet as well as the expensive hobby items in my husband's workroom.

I was shocked and upset. I felt my son had violated the privacy of my home by locking the cabinet and leaving with the keys. Therefore, I called him and told himIwantedthemreturnedthenextday. Mysonbegancryingandsaying,"Mom, why are you doing this to me?"

I was perplexed then and remain perplexed as to how he thought I was doing anything"to him" in a smuch as it was he who had locked me out of a cabinet in my own home. I felt then, and continue to feel, that I had every right to tell him I wanted the keys back. A few days later, my son told me he was "crushed, CRUSHED!" by my request.

My son's wife is an attorney. She sees nothing wrong with what my son did, and in fact, has criticized me for my remarks about his "secreting the keys from loss of your husband, and second for the loss of your illusions about your child. Please, I urge you, do not allow him to emotionally blackmail you. He owes you an apology.

DEARABBY: One of my husband's friends gave me a "white elephant" gift this week. To be specific, it was more like apinkpiggift.That'sright-Igotafuzzy pink pig that snores and says something about eating slop. My husband was given a beautiful leather wallet!

He says I'm being paranoid to think his friend gave me the pig to make fun of me. He says his friend is a prankster, not a critic. I say, how would he like it if we gave his girlfriend a stuffed pig? What doyouthinkaboutthis, Abby?-FRAN INILLINOIS

DEARFRAN: Ithink that if ever a gift begged to be re-gifted, it's your fuzzy pink pig. Next Christmas, wrap it beautifully and return it to the prankster. Be sure to include a small container of Pepto-Bismol. It's pink, so it will coordinate nicely. Perhaps it will neutralize some of the acid in the man's sense of humor
