

God wants a great life, better eternity for us

Life is great, and eternity is going to be even better! God truly wants us to enjoy both, I am convinced of that.

Even though in life there are valleys of tears at times, God is able and is wanting to make it a place of springs (Ps 84:6).

Friend, wherever there is a spring there is life! My wife and I have taken a little journey for a couple of months now and it has been good!

Where has it gone? Away from junk food and unhealthy eating habits! The result, more energy and lighter feet if you know what I mean!

We gave up eating some stuff, because that is really what it is. We still eat, but it is sustenance that is good for us.

That got me thinking about excuses people (including myself) have made for not eating right.

Don't ask me how, but I took it a step further.

Have you given up eating? Everybody has a good excuse for not attending church. If you take those excuses and apply them to other things we do (or don't do), like eating, they might look like this list.

1. I was forced to eat as a child.
2. People who eat all the time are hypocrites; they aren't really hungry.

3. There are so many different kinds of food that I can't decide what to eat.
4. I used to eat, but I got bored and stopped.

5. I only eat on special occasions, like Christmas and Easter.
6. None of my friends will eat with me.

7. I'll start eating when I get older.
8. I don't really have time to eat.
9. I don't believe that eating does anybody any good. It is just a crutch.

10. Restaurants and grocery stores are only after your money.
- Perhaps you have been disconnected from church for some time now. I would love to invite you back. Sure, you're welcome at Calvary, but please go somewhere that will give you a nourishing diet of God's Word!

If you have stopped going to church or have never gone I would like to know why. Would you take a moment and shoot me an email. No strings attached. I want to hear your story.

I don't believe in beating around the bush so I am going to say this and please don't take offense.

Giving a lame excuse for rejecting your Creator is just as silly as giving up eating. A relationship with your Maker is as important as regular, balanced meals. Without spiritual food, we will die. (1 Peter 2:2)

Well, the dinner bell is ringing and I am hungry so we will chat with you next week.

I realize this column is shorter than normal so take some time to interact with me. Remember love God and love people!

Tomato leaf spot can be managed in home garden

Early blight (caused by alternaria) and septoria leaf spot are two tomato diseases that tend to pop up in June.

Both of the disease-causing fungi survive the winter on infected plant debris, and they can be introduced on infected transplants and seeds.

These fungi tend to get established on the lower, inner leaves first. Septoria leaf spot is characterized by abundant small (about 1/8 inch) gray circular spots with dark borders. Sometimes you can see little black dots in the lesions.

Early blight causes larger lesions that are dark brown or gray with many concentric darker rings, like a target. The two can occur on the same plant, and both can cause defoliation, which weakens the plant and decreases fruit quantity and quality.

Both are favored by wet conditions. The first step in managing these leaf spots is to stake or cage plants to promote good air movement and prevent high humidity and leaf wetness. Control weeds to further improve airflow.

Placing straw mulch around the plants can also reduce pathogen spread by reducing splash dispersal. Try to avoid watering late in the day (which increases the dew period) and avoid watering the foliage — direct the water onto the ground and avoid splash.

During the season, pull out any infected leaves. Be sure to check the leaves at the bottom and interior of the plants where the pathogens might be hiding. At the end of the season, try to clean up any old, infected debris.

Chemical control can be useful if you have a history of leaf spots. Check out the home garden products at your garden store. Chemicals that are labeled for this include chlorothalonil, maneb and copper compounds, but there are more.

Read the label carefully. Start applications early. It is nearly impossible to regain control by the time you see a lot of lesions.
