

People came Bundled up for Flatlander

Despite the cold — fishing is a year-around sport, after all — kids and adults came prepared to hook the catfish in the free Fishing Hole set up Saturday on Main by Greg Williams of Just Ponds and More. The catfish tried to hide, but they were hungry and did bite the worms offered on the many hooks.

The Baird family of Goodland, (from left) Julia, Ben, Katie and Perry, had the right kind of weather Saturday to sell clam chowder at the Flatlander Fall Festival. Perry said he had sold his homemade chowder in Colorado Springs before moving back to Goodland this spring. The family decided at the last minute to give it a try at Flatlanders, he said.

It was not too cold Saturday to get your face painted as many did by Shannan Garrett, graphics instructor at the Northwest Kansas Technical College.

Students from the technical college welding class tried to stay warm and demonstrate the comfort of the wagon-wheel swing the class made to sell at the Flatlander Fall Festival.
