for a slice of fresh lemon to add a special touch and a dash of flavor to your water.

• Do lunch. Lunch menus often offer the same items as dinner menus, but in smaller and lower-priced options. So opting to go out for lunch, or for an early afternoon supper, can save money. However, even during the evening, a smaller portion or half-order may be offered. Opt for the smaller size and you'll get more than enough food while saving money.

• Clue in on coupons. Some restaurants send out coupons to entice your business. Check your mail, local paper, and even the Internet for special offers. Many restaurants have a weekly kid's night — where kids under a certain age get a free or reduced-cost meal when they eat with an adult.

• Plan your Budget. To reduce your spending on away-from-home dining, reduce how often you and your family eat out. For instance, pick one time every week or two. Plan where you want to go, cut your coupons and enjoy the meal! If you have a hectic family schedule, look for inexpensive foods when shopping at the grocery store that you can easily use to pack your own "meals to go", and for foods to make quick meals to serve at home.
