Let's Go to the Museum

By Fonda Farr, curator

How wonderful to have so many visitors so early in the tourist season. To date we have entertained 108 guests. They have been interested and very interesting. One couple from Washington State was on their way to North Carolina to see their grandchildren. He is a descendant of Joseph Allen, one of the area's early settlers.

I would like to let everyone know that the Tourist Information Center in the old port of entry building is now open and those ladies will be directing traffic to all of us downtown. They have already sent the LandMark and us visitors the second day they were open. So, hope this will continue. Too many people passing through aren't aware that we have such a nice downtown and museum.

The genealogy society members have agreed to help us update the little county cemeteries. We will start that soon in our free time before it warms up too much.

We have had a lot of fun helping Gary and LeMoine Guinn in the quest for their family. Gary may tell you we are leading him on a wild goose chase but he is still finding more information. They are fortunate to have other folks doing different lines of their family and things seem to be coming together quite nicely. This week research has been done on Hancock, Hyde and Wonderly.

Our guests have traveled from Washington, Nebraska, Florida, Indiana, Oregon and Kansas.
