Correction

An article in the Sept. 29 edition of The Oberlin Herald, written by a Decatur Dictator staff member, said Decatur Community High's Homecoming queen would be crowned at half time of the football game. The queen was crowned at the assembly before the Homecoming parade. This error was added in editing, and was not The Dictator's fault.

Nice rains to end September will get the 2005 wheat crop out of the ground in good shape. Those who have not finished planting will be able to take advantage of nice weather this week. There will be chances for scattered storms Wednesday, otherwise sunny skies and near normal temperatures prevail. A second disturbance over the weekend may kick up a few more storms, but we will have to wait until the middle of next week before a shot of colder air drops south out of Canada and changes our weather pattern.

Precipitation totals: for the week, 0.79; for the month of September, 4.30; for the month of October, 0.10; current year to date, 21.19. Total precipitation for September of last year was 0.56. For 24-hour weather radio broadcast, tune scanner to 162.475 mhz.
