Officials recognize American Education Week

This week is the 83rd observance of the American Education Week, with this year's theme being "Celebrating the American Dream."
In honor of the week, Oberlin school officials are urging parents to visit their kids' classrooms and find out what they can do to help and how to work better with the teachers.
High School Principal Charles Haag said Friday will be Substitute Teachers Day.
A letter signed by Mr. Haag, Principal Duane Dorshorst and Superintendent Kelly Glodt says, "Substitute educators are serious about the education of the community's children. They are professionals who have learned their craft and are as skilled as the people they replace on a daily basis. They, too, nurture and inspire children. They help students learn essential skills not always measured by tests, such as critical thinking, conflict resolution, cooperation and problem solving."

Today is Education Support Professionals Day. Mr. Haag said he hopes everyone will tell these people thank you during this week.

Man honored with award

Jim Blume, president of Developmental Services of Northwest Kansas, received InterHab's Distinguished Leadership Award at the group's annual conference recently at the Hyatt Regency in Wichita.
The award goes each year to an individual whose career has included long-standing service and who has demonstrated personal and professional integrity and statewide contributions.

InterHab is a resource network for community service organizations in Kansas which provides support, technical assistance and advocacy and through its members provides leadership at the local, state and national level to support people with disabilities.

Corrections

A story about Marian Cathcart in the Nov. 10 edition of The Oberlin Herald omitted the name of her nephew, Virgil Cathcart of Oberlin, as a local relative. This was a reporter's error.

A little bit of snow and colder weather over the weekend was perfect for pheasant hunting. This week we will start off with a couple dry and warm afternoons. Tomorrow and Thursday a storm system kicks northeast out of Mexico and brings rain chances into the High Plains. Friday the area will be caught between a slow moving southern system over the southeast U.S. and a Canadian front coming over the northern Rockies. Behind the front colder air and chances for snow drop in for the weekend then by turkey Day we are back into the 50's!
