Kids make pig story come alive

Dressed in pink pig ears and noses, a gray wolf hat and "farmer" clothes, the afternoon kindergarten class at Oberlin Elementary School entertained around 35 parents, grandparents and friends Monday afternoon.

The students performed "The Three Piggy Opera" in the gym. Each had a part, including the wolf, mother pig, three little pigs, straw peddlers, stick peddlers and brick peddlers. Fourth graders Jordin Wasson and Cassidy Shields narrated the story, told mainly through song, for the performance.

The kindergartners put on the play in the morning and afternoon on Valentine's Day each year for family and friends.

Teacher Carol Brown said the students have been working on the production since school began after Christmas with the help of music teacher, Jim Buchholz.

After the performance, the students took family members back to the kindergarten room for cookies and treats and to help them open their valentines.

WITH BRICKS in their hands, Adrian Chambers, Gatlin Hissong, Megan Lohofener and Carmen Winder tried to sell some to one of the little pigs.
