Intelligent Design

Breeding better beef cattle is the result of combining the best science and technology, the most accurate data and optimum genetics. If the process is applied without fail, every year significant documented genetic improvements will be achieved. For over 50 years, as sound science has allowed and through extensive use of AI and embryo transfer, we have continuously applied selection pressure for moderate birth weight and moderate frame size while dramatically improving weaning and yearling weights, carcass quality and yield. Each year, the resulting calf crop is designed to produce "pounds in the right package".

Over 77% of GAR bulls in 2006 were out of the 2004-2005 donor herd. The top five females in our 2005-2006 donor herd were some of the highest performing females in the history of Gardiner Angus Ranch. Our 2006-2007 donor herd is even more impressive, besting the 2005-2006 females by 5-25% in every trait!

Where do we go from here? Our customers sell outputs. It is our responsibility as beef producers to design cattle that require minimal inputs and produce maximum outputs. We use every resource to provide the very best opportunities to add value to their products. At Gardiner Angus Ranch, that's intelligent design.
