With the weather warming and sun shining, there's a temptation to get in the car and go. Drivers who are diligent about preparing their car for winter driving may think they can skip maintenance in preparation for spring and summer road trips, but they shouldn't.

To make sure your vehicle is roadworthy ahead of summer temperatures near the century mark, begin by reading the owner's fluid reservoir. manual to make sure you are current on routine and periodic recomcially in older cars. mended maintenance. Consider these tips:

• Check the oil and, if not quite due for an oil change, consider changing the oil prior to a long trip. Changing the oil as recommended by the manufacturer, every 3,000 to 5,000 miles will protect the engine.

• Check belts, hoses, radiator and heater/air conditioner every six months. Newer cars are increasingly sophisticated and that may mean changing a belt or hose is no longer a do-it-yourself job. Also, make sure the radiator mix is the same year around. Antifreeze is needed to reduce rusting, overheating and for lubrication of the water pump.

 Check tire pressure and adjust accordingly; uneven or low tire pressure can reduce gas mileage, cause excess wear and may cause a blowout. Look also for signs of uneven wear or damage to a tire; rotate and balance tires and align wheels periodically, particularly after hitting a curb or pothole.

• Check lights, turn signals, and power or manual windows.

• Check windshield wipers and start looking if you fail to arrive. replace, if necessary; fill washer

'ADeath That Saves' By Pastor Heidi M. Wiebe, Evangelical Covenant Church of Oberlin

It is never easy to watch a loved one die, especially if their death is a painful one.

When I was a pastor in Iowa, I was a chaplain for the county hospice program. One of the patients I worked with was dealing with intense pain, brought on by cancer which had pervaded his body. In order to keep him comfortable, he was given pain medication.

nurse had to increase the level of pain medication to keep him comfortable. The last 24 hours of his life were excruciating for him and for his family, due to the toxic levels of pain medication in his body. Hallucinating and restless, it was not an easy death for his family to witness.

As painful as his death was to witness, I thought that his family might be upset about the care they had received from hospice. But their reaction sur- of the world with him.

when it came time for him to die. As dangerous as it might have been for them to be there, they could not imagine being anywhere else except with Jesus at this moment of his death.

Death by crucifixion was excruciatingly painful, for he knew that when he died, he would take the sins

This week in both Bible studies we looked at the principals of sowing and reaping. The ladies were well acquainted with the concept of sowing and reaping as it related to crops and harvest, most having been either raised on a farm or married to a farmer.

They were able to give me (a city girl) some invaluable insights. They knew the truth of the Scripture that states, "He who sows sparingly will also reap sparingly, and he who sows bountifully will also reap bountifully." (II Corinthians

When we applied this to our spiritual walk, we could easily see the benefit of sowing seeds of kindness, encouragement, and love into the lives of others. We can even plant seeds of salvation in those who don't yet know Jesus as their Lord and Savior, understanding that we may not be around to reap the harvest. Sowing and reaping happen in different seasons, but harvest time will surely come.

As I reviewed the activities last week, I was again struck by the number of volunteers who faithfully come week after week. They will be blessed for giving of their time and talents to our Good Sam family. People in this community are so generous and give in so many different ways.

Just for fun, let's take a sampling of a typical week to see how many volunteers passed through: Monday - Barbara Dehlinger, devotions; Cheryl Miller, piano; 180 House boys, discussion group.

Tuesday - Phil Erickson, devotions; Diana Steinmetz, Jeni Henningson and 18 first-graders, First Hand Friends; Dennis Brown, For-grandparent; Larry Mack, poker night; Steve Stacy, painting in Garden of Hope.

Just in one week, 43 community members came sowing seeds of love and friendship. Isn't God good to have placed Good Sam on the hearts of so many? We do appreciate all who contribute and I know there are many more whom I have not mentioned by name.

We are seeking some new volunteers to work in the Garden of Hope activity room, and also some pen pals. If this is something you would like to do, please call Lisa Stacy at (785) 475-2245.

We will be celebrating our volunteers at 2 p.m. on Saturday during National Volunteer Week.
