Ethanol meeting to explain process using plant waste about cellulosic ethanol, a process that makes alcohol for fuel from plant waste, not grain, is invited to a public meeting at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday

Connie Grafel, marketing director with the Oberlin-Decatur County Economic Development Corp., said many people are familiar with ethanol made from corn, but the high price of corn could cause

Ms. Grafel said she wrote the Kansas Wheat Commission about cellulosic ethanol, which is made from existing agricultural residue like wheat, rice, barley straw, corn stover, sugarcane bagasse and switchgrass. She said Sam Willcoxon, a Decatur Community High School graduate, is interested in ethanol and farming.

something that can just happen right away, said Ms. Grafel, but the long process has to start now. First, said Ms. Grafel, the development group needs to find out if people in the county are interested in cellulosic

Ms. Grafel said she received a response from the wheat commission, which said they would send a rep- and ask questions.

Anyone interested in learning resentative here to answer questions. The commission also sent out information, she said, including some talking points.

One notes that the U.S. Department of Energy is providing grants to build the nation's first three commercial-scale cellulosic ethanol plants. Ms. Grafel said Junction City already has some companies and the legislature has given both the University of Kansas and Kansas State University money for research and development.

Maybe if people in Decatur County show a little interest, she said, the existing companies will take notice, then they will do some field trials here. She said she has read that you can't haul the feed stock more than 50 miles and still make a profit.

With ecofallow practices, said An ethanol plant in the area isn't Ms. Grafel, farmers are asking if they should consider ethanol, since usually they leave crop residue like straw on the fields and with this process, they are being asked to take it

> Ms. Grafel said she would like many farmers and other people interested in the process to show up for the public meeting, get information

Oberlin schools lose councilor, only band teacher

The Oberlin School District has lor and English teacher. two more spots to fill in the teachdistrict's only band teacher and a high school counselor-junior high English teacher next week.

Superintendent Kelly Glodt said the last day to turn in letters of resignation was Tuesday, May 15, the day after the May board meeting. The district received two, from

The board, said Dr. Glodt, will ing staff for next year if the board look at the resignations at the June accepts resignations from the meeting. He said he talked to both teachers to get permission to advertise to fill the positions, which the district is doing, but the resignations haven't been accepted yet.

Normally, said Dr. Glodt, they look first inside the district to see if anyone is interested in the positions, then start to look elsewhere. He said Christie Morris, band teacher at the the principals and board can look at grade and high school, and from district applicants with any out-of-Nita Lavielle, high school counse- district applicants at the same time.

City approves pay for summer help

The Oberlin City Council approved pay rates for several temporary seasonal workers and other employees at a meeting Thursday,

City Administrator Gary Shike said he has the authority to hire the people, but the council has to approve the pay rates.

The council approved all of Mr. Shike's suggestions, which in-

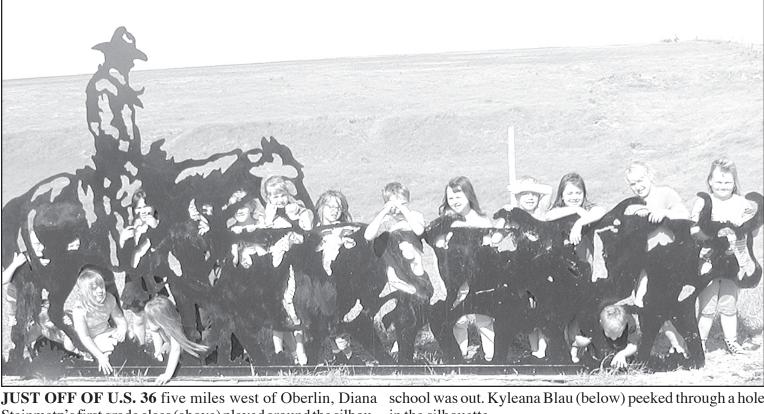

- Rusty Grafel, pool manager, at
- Melvin Martin, street depart-
- Audra Garst, city crew, $7 hour. ment, $8.50 an hour.

• Delbert Bruning, to mow Sappa

Park seasonally, at $9.50 an hour. • Dave Orr, kitchen staff, at $6.50

For all other first-time workers for the pool or summer employees, $5.15 an hour, and an additional $.25 an hour for each year worked. Councilwoman Rhonda May asked who Mr. Grafel reports to, Mr. Shike said to him. She asked if he could talk to him about running a tighter ship this year. For example, she said, if a lifeguard is on the chair, they shouldn't be talking to their friends on the deck, but watching the Steinmetz's first grade class (above) played around the silhou- in the silhouette. ette of a cowboy driving longhorn cattle the week before

- Herald staff photos by Kimberly Davis

Cutout recalls Old West

Anyone traveling west of Oberlin on U.S. 36 may have noticed the addition of a black metal silhouette of a cowboy and longhorn cattle on the south side of the road.

The sculpture, about five miles west of town on land owned by Sam and Diana Steinmetz, looks like a small cattle drive getting ready to head over the highway to the north. It features a cutout of a cowboy and several longhorn cattle. There is no sign telling about the cattle drives.

Connie Grafel, city marketing director, who serves on the Oberlin Convention and Visitors Bureau, said the organization paid for the work with money collected from the "bed" tax, paid on hotel rooms in

The piece, she said, cost about $2,000 through Gerver Metals of McCook. It recalls the Texas Cattle Trail, which came through Decatur County more than 100 years ago. Ms. Grafel said the trail passed within a mile or two of the site.

Before school was out, Mrs. Steinmetz said, she took her firstgrade class from Oberlin Elementary School to see the silhouette. The kids looked through the holes in the piece while they watched the couple's live cattle walk away from their loud voices, she said.

Ms. Grafel said the bureau plans to put in similar sculptures on top of the hill south of Cedar Bluffs off of

That one will be a hayrack pulled by two horses, she said, a symbol that comes directly out of the description in one of the Ralph Moody books about pioneer life in that part of Decatur County.

She said the bureau would like to have others south and east of town, but that probably won't happen this

The bureau operates on a budget of $4,000 to $7,000 a year, she said, depending on collections from the city bed tax. It is run by a sevenmember board with interests in tour-

Commissioners buy new furnace, air conditioning unit from local firm

By KIMBERLY DAVIS

kldavis@nwkansas.com After some discussion and several

phone calls, Decatur County commissioners accepted the low bid on a new furnace and air conditioner for the health department office and At the meeting Tuesday, May 15

Health Administrator Marilyn

sen's Plumbing, Heating and Air Conditioning, Fidele Electric and Center for bids on the project. Only the first two returned bids.

From Hansen, the commissioners a three-phase air conditioning systioner only for $2,171 or a furnace single-phase air conditioner only for Woodcrafting and R&M Service $2,976 and the last for a singlephase furnace and air conditioner

From Fidele, the commissioners received four bids. The first was for received two bids for an air conditem for $2,866, the second for a and air conditioner for $3,506. The Gamblin said she contacted Han- three-phase furnace and air condi- bids were good for either single or Fidele and see if the electrical work tioner for $4,693, the third for a three-phase power. All of the unit bids were from Lennox.

Marvin Hansen, owner of Hansen's, was at the meeting to answer questions. He said the county might want to go with a single-phase unit which could be run off a standby generator. Commissioner Ralph Unger said they needed to call Greg was included in his bids. Reached by phone, Mr. Fidele said the electrical work wasn't included in his bids. That would cost an additional $125, he said, bringing his two bids to $2,296 and $3,631.

The commissioners approved the low bid from Fidele.

In other business, the commis-

• Heard that the storm siren by the hospital isn't working. Fire Chief Bill Cathcart looked at it. She called Bert Cool, emergency preparedness director, who said he will have someone work on it.

• Heard that Ms. Gamblin has her department's bioterrorism trailer back with shelving in it.

Shelli's Hair esign

is proud to announce that as of June 6, Shelby Brown will be joining our staff.

Please stop by and visit with her.

SENIOR CITIZEN ALERT Don't Get Scammed

Older Americans are the No. 1 targets of INVESTMENT FRAUD The files of state securities agencies are filled with tragic examples of seniors who have been l convinced to give their savings, windfall insurance payments and | even equity in their homes to con artists for fraudulent investments. I BEFORE giving money, or if you believe you have been the victim of a scam, contact the Office of the Kansas Securities Commissioner:

1-888-40-SCAMS

Visit our website for additional information:

Clip and save with your financial records for future reference.

www.dontgetscammed.org Paid for with public investor education funds

CREATIVE MOVEMENTS GYMNASTICS

Friday Mornings during June - July

Mom and tot Class 2-4 yr olds - 30 minutes

Current or previous members skill retention class - 60 minutes

FOR MORE INFORMATION OR TO ENROLL, CALL: Robyn Rouse 785-475-8987