Good Samaritan Center

Picture in your mind gazing out the windows of Town Square, the sun glistening through the icicles hanging on the front porch. The landscape is blanketed with snowy grandeur, everything is still and silent. In the beauty of the moment one cannot help but think of our awesome God.

Then, turning to face those who have come to hear the morning devotion, you are struck by the mirror image of what is outdoors. You can see the Son, glistening in the eyes that meet yours. The dining room is blanketed with the grandeur of snowy white heads waiting with quiet anticipation to hear the Word

These mature individuals have experienced His abundant blessings and are keenly aware how great His love is! How sweet it is to meet God every morning with them. Anita leads us in singing, praising and giving Him thanks through song.

Christmas decorations have come down, all but the tree and frozen pond in Town Square. We will be celebrating winter yet this month, all the activities culminating with a Jack Frost Party on Jan. 29.

It is a little humorous, when inviting residents to activities, to hear a very common response: "No, thanks, I don't want to go out in this weather." They just like to cozy up in their recliners with the TV or a good book. Just like home!

Monday in the Garden of Hope, the book "Snow Angel" by Debbie Boone was read. In the story the snow turns colors, as if confetti is floating from the sky, so Ruth Laidig, Dorothy Hunt, and Nadine of confetti snowmen using the pointillism technique with markers. They and Muriel Ready then made another snowman, this time using 'ice cube" beads.

Table ball was a hit. Leo Mooty, Dorothy Hunt, Muriel Ready, Nadine Anderson, Ruth Laidig and Eleanor Demmer all took part.

Tuesday was New Year's Day. This is always a time of great reflection, looking back over the past year and looking forward to the new. Resolutions are still made, although they are not the same as they used to be. You don't hear the usual ones like, "I want to lose weight" or "I need to get my finances in order." You are much more likely to hear, "I want my children to know they are loved" or "I want to deepen my relationship with the Lord." Another good lesson for those of the younger

Stop illness before it starts

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention estimates that foodborne illness sickens 76 million people, requires about 325,000 hospitalizations, and causes 5,000 deaths in the U.S. annually. The holidays can be a dangerous time for this if care is not taken.

The numbers may not tell the whole story. Symptoms of foodborne illness – abdominal cramps, nausea, vomiting, diarrhea, fever and dehydration – can be mistaken for the flu or a minor stomach up-

Symptoms can occur soon after eating a contaminated food, but may not become apparent for several Hepatitis A, a viral disease that affects the liver, is an example. The virus can be spread through direct contact such as shaking hands or through food that has been prepared by an infected person.

Symptoms of Hepatitis Ainclude fever, tiredness, loss of appetite, nausea, dark urine, and jaundice. Symptoms may not be apparent immediately, but can linger for two to six months.

Some people have Hepatitis A without any symptoms.

In contrast, the Norovirus, which also can be spread by a food handler infected with the virus or by contact after an infected person has touched a surface such as a doorknob, can spread quickly between people in close contact with each other at home or in a public place.

Symptoms of Norovirus include nausea, vomiting, diarrhea, and stomach cramps that can begin suddenly and may last one to two

Food safety errors can occur during production, processing, transportation, food storage, and food preparation.

Anyone can be vulnerable to food-borne illness. But certain populations such as infants and children, whose immune systems are not yet fully developed; the elderly, whose immune systems may be compromised by aging, poor nutrition or chronic illness' pregnant women; and those undergoing medical treatment, such as chemotherapy, can face an increased risk.

Something as simple as washing hands before and after using the rest room can be effective in reducing the risk of any food-borne illness as well as respiratory illnesses.

In a study reported by the Department of Agriculture, students in six tion, contact the county extension classrooms who washed their hands on arrival, before lunch, after recess and before leaving each day had 24 percent fewer sick days due to respiratory illness. Those students also had 51 percent fewer days lost because of stomach upset.

The current recommendation is to wash hands with warm, soapy water for 20 seconds:

• Before and after handling

• After using the rest room or helping a child do the same; • After changing a diaper (for the parent or care giver and the child); After handling pets;

After tending to a sick person;

• After blowing your nose, coughing or sneezing.

Someone!

He knew it was a long trip, so he packed his suitcase with Twinkies and a six-pack of root beer.

When he had gone about three blocks, he met an elderly man sitting in the park feeding some pigeons.

The boy sat down next to him and opened his suitcase. He was about to take a drink when he noticed that the man looked hungry. So he offered him a Twinkie.

The man accepted and smiled. His smile was so pleasant that the boy wanted to see it again. So he offered him a root beer. Again, the man smiled at him. The boy was delighted! They sat there all afternoon eating and smiling, but they never said a word. As it grew dark, the boy realized how tired he was and he got up to leave. But before he had gone more than a few steps he turned around, ran back to the man, and gave him a hug. The man gave him the biggest smile ever. When the boy opened the door to his own house a short time later, his mother saw the joy on his face. She asked him, "What did you do today that made

He replied, "I had lunch with God. You know what? God's got the most beautiful smile I've ever seen!"

Meanwhile the elderly man, also radiant with joy, returned to his home. His son was stunned by the look of peace on his face and he asked, "Dad, what did you do today that made you so happy?

He replied, "I ate Twinkies in the park with God. You know, he's much younger than I expected." Many years back, there was that whole "random acts of kindness" craze going on.

But once it was over-commercialized, it just sort of died out and left the collective consciousness of

I always wondered, Why does it have to be random?

Why not go out each day with the intent of performing kindness that day?

Then all we need to do is to wait for the opportunity to present itself.

The opportunity may be random, but the intent isn't. In Colossians Paul wrote, "And so, as those who have been chosen of God, holy and beloved, put on a heart of compassion, kindness, humility, gentleness and patience.

We are the chosen of God, for we have chosen God. That's important, for the choosing goes both ways. God chooses us, each of His children, to follow Him but we have to choose to follow Him.

The power of free will is in our hands because God gave it to us. God knows the power within choice, so He gave us the hearts and minds and spirits to choose how we want to live our lives. We get to choose to have the power of the Holy Spirit behind us, working within us, when we choose to follow the Lord. We may never know if we make an impact on someone else's life. Think of it as planting a seed that will be harvested by someone else. But that doesn't mean we shouldn't make the choice to have a positive impact on someone else's life

Jesus did not command the whole world to go to church. Jesus commanded His church to go to the whole world. So we should, each and every day.

We need to challenge ourselves in this new year to make the commitment each day to do some kindness that day. Talk to someone you don't know. Share yourself, your lunch, your faith.

So when you both go home that night, you will feel the peace and joy of God's presence in your life. In the words of Paul, "Put on a heart of compassion, kindness, humility, gentleness and patience.' Share a Twinkie with God.
