Enrollment drops 26 in a year

By KIMBERLY DAVIS
k.davis@nwkansas.com

The Oberlin School District dropped 26 students in the overall count from last year to this year, a decline of about 6 percent.

Superintendent Pat Cullen said on the official state count day, Monday, Sept. 22, Decatur Community High School had 178 students. Last year the school had 202 students, for a decrease of 24 kids, or 12 percent.

"That's a pretty good drop," he said.

At Oberlin Elementary School, however, the numbers just about stayed the same with 207 students last year and 205 this year.

The grade school lost some kids over the weekend just before count day, said Dr. Cullen, but that's just how it goes sometimes.

This year's budget, he said, was done with the idea the district would have 370 students. The district actually has 380, 10 more than projected.

Where the drop of 26 kids is really going to hurt is during budget time next year, he said. The district uses a three-year average to figure the budget, and the drop of 26 kids is going to hurt. For every student, said

Dr. Cullen, the district receives at least the state minimum of $4,400. Depending on the needs of the child and the weight that goes along with that, the district gets an average of $7,000 each.

A drop of better than 20 students, he said, depending on the weighting of each one, it could mean $100,000 less in state money come next year. Or more.

Dr. Cullen said a lot of the decline is from the district graduating bigger classes than it brings in. The positive news is that it looks like things might be leveling out a little.

When the kindergarten class is the same size as the district average of 30, he said, that's good news. This year the kindergarten has 29 students, said Dr. Cullen.

Besides graduating large classes, last year the district had 40 graduates in May, one of the largest classes in recent years.

This trend isn't anything new, he said. It's typical of rural America and rural school districts. There just aren't the jobs and other elements in the economy to attract people who have kids to come live here, said Dr. Cullen.

Men make plans for training spot at former ranch

By KIMBERLY DAVIS
k.davis@nwkansas.com

A retired colonel and an active National Guard member are working on a plan to turn the former youth ranch at Sappa Park into the Northwest Kansas Multi-Agency Training Center.

Randy McHugh, Decatur County undersheriff and a National Guard sergeant, and retired Col. Gary Allen held a meeting about the idea to build a first-responder training center last Tuesday.

The meeting brought out Sheriff Ken Badsky, county commissioners Stan McEvoy and Ralph Unger, ambulance director Linda Manning, Connie Grafel of the Oberlin-Decatur County Economic Development Corp., City Council members Marcia Lohofener, Jay Anderson and Rhonda May, business owner Rusty Addleman, state Rep. John Faber, the Rev. Doug Hasty of the Oberlin United Methodist Church, Patti Skubal, county emergency management director, and Lee "Doc" Franklin, a candidate for county commissioner.

The Kansas National Guard, said Mr. McHugh, is putting a training hub in Salina and then will build four "spokes" to the hub around the state. The Oberlin site could be a (See MEN on Page 10A)

Crops not ready for county harvest

A trickle of fall crops has been harvested and brought to elevators in Decatur County in the past few weeks, but with wheat drilling going on and Monday's rain, officials think harvest won't really start for at least a week.

At the Decatur Co-op, General Manager Kurt Anderson said they've had one or two loads of corn and a few soybeans. It's still early for fall harvest to start, he said.

Most farmers are still trying to get their wheat planting finished up before they start harvesting the fall crops, he said.

Before Monday's rain, Mr. Anderson added, he would have thought fall harvest would have started in a week to 10 days. Now it will be later.

At the co-op, said Mr. Anderson, they have made a little room for the fall crops by shipping out quite a bit of wheat. Also, he said, they have added a bunker at the crop production site east of town, on the south side of U.S. 36, to hold the fall crops. A new facility at the Danbury elevator should be ready for harvest, said Mr. Anderson, and the co-op recently purchased the elevator in Norcatur.

Janice O'Hare with Hansen Mueller Grain in Oberlin said the firm got in a little bit of milo before it rained. Some of the farmers commented last week that it would probably be two more weeks before things really start rolling, she said, but that was before the rain.

County to pay debt for only 10 years

The Decatur County commissioners talked with a lawyer from the bond firm, Gilmore and Bell, about general obligation bonds to pay for a new senior center during their meeting last Tuesday, agreeing that the county will only be in debt for 10 years.

Garth Herrmann said the county won't actually make a payment on the bond issue until November 2010, although a $15,000 payment will be due next year for interest.

"If the county can't swing that," said Commissioner Ralph Unger, "we're in trouble."

Later, commissioners opened bids for a truck for the noxious weed department and road and bridge to share to spray weeds along and on roads. They decided to buy a 2008 Dodge pickup for $26,978 from Taylor Motors of Colby. After a call to the company, though, the commissioners found out the truck had been sold.

A representative from Taylor called after lunch with a different 2008 Dodge truck that met the specifications for the same price. Mr. Unger called Commissioner Stan McEvoy and the men approved the purchase.

Horse enthusiasts plan a trail ride

By KAREN KRIEN
karen.k@nwkansas.com

Round up your horse and saddle up for the 17th Cheyenne County Trail Ride, which starts at 2 p.m. sharp on Sunday and will last about 2 1/2 hours at the Kelly and Penny Gienger farm, 10.2 miles north of St. Francis.

Last year, the weather turned cold and the ride was rained out. The coordinators say they hope for better weather this year. If the weather is bad on Sunday, though, the ride will be held the following Sunday, Oct. 19, same place, same time.

Gary Cooper, one of the coordinators, said this ride will cover more rough terrain than some of the others.

"There will be very little flat land and one water crossing," he said.

Those on the ride will also be able to donate to St. Jude Children's Research Hospital.

"Donations will be accepted for the kids who would like to saddle up but can't," said coordinator Sharon Olofson.

Two years ago, a ride northeast of St. Francis drew fewer people, but Mr. Cooper said that was probably because of the cool, damp weather and the price of fuel. He said he is hoping for more people this year — anywhere from 90 to 124 riders.

To reach the starting point from St. Francis, turn north on Benton Street off U.S. 36 and travel 3 miles to a set of transformers, go around the curve northeast, then north 7.2 miles to Road H, about 10 miles. Turn east for half a mile, then turn left and follow the lane to the parking area.

From Benkelman, Neb., go 13 miles west on U.S. 34 to Road 15 (Mills Hereford Ranch sign), then south 7.8 miles to Road Y, turn east and go half a mile, then turn left and follow the lane to the parking area.

From Haigler, Neb., go 8 miles east on U.S. 34 to Road 15 (Mills Hereford Ranch sign), then south. Signs will be posted at various points.

During the ride, members of the Cheyenne County Historical Society will provide refreshments. Afterward, the 4-H Horse Club will serve a barbecue with the meat prepared by Doug Ross.

For information, call Mr. Cooper at (785) 332-2904, Mrs. Olofson at 332-2248, Gail Yonkey at 332-2488, Joe Hoffman at 332-2154 or Todd Krien at 332-3246.

*Men want local spot for training

spoke down the line, he said.

The center here would provide a place for first responders in the 18 county region to train, Mr. McHugh said, and that would cut down on travel for people who have to head to eastern Kansas today.

The facility, he said, could be used for all first responders, including law enforcement, fire fighters, ambulance crews and fire and those who serve in another emergency office.

Mr. McHugh said he thinks the National Guard is looking for a town that will take an interest and help build the center.

The main question is will the city and the county work together on this? said Ms. Grafel. Will the city give a minimal-cost lease for the land? she asked, adding that this project can't really move forward without both the city and county being on board.

This plan includes just the area around the former youth ranch and those buildings, said Mr. McHugh. He said he could see other parts of the park being used for training sometimes, but said the group isn't about taking over the park.

This training center would be something that everyone in the area could use, he said.

Another thing the county needs to do, he said, is get the fire reports from Decatur County sent to the state. Without those reports being sent in, said Mr. McHugh, it could be hard to get grants for the project.

There's a concrete pad at the ranch that could be used for metal containers for training, he said, and other areas that could and would be used. The buildings have a dining hall and sleeping quarters.

Mr. McHugh said the facility could be used for camps for kids as well as a training center.

In the first 36 to 48 hours of any emergency, said Mr. McHugh, it is going to just be the local people handling things, and they need to be trained for that.

Right now, the youth ranch area is going to waste, said Mr. McHugh, but it should never be sold.

There is some question, said Mr. McHugh, about needing to do an environmental impact study for the project.

Ms. May suggested he call the city's engineers, Miller and Associates. Rep. Faber said he would also help in any way he can, as he is familiar with economic and environmental impact statements.

People still have time to register to vote here

The last day to register to vote in the upcoming November election is coming right up, and if you're not registered, you only have about 10 days to get on the list.

The registration books will be open until 9 p.m. Monday, Oct. 20, in the Decatur County clerk's office.

Clerk Marilyn Horn, who is also the county election officer, said anyone who has moved needs to re-register, even if they have previously been registered. Anyone who changed their name because of marriage don't have to re-register, she said, but those who have changed their last name in court do. For example, said Mrs. Horn, if someone got a divorce and went back to their maiden name, they need to re-register.

If you have never registered to vote, you need to bring in a Social Security card or driver's license, she said.

Advance ballots for the general election will be available on Tuesday, Oct. 21, and people can go to the clerk's office to vote early or have the ballot mailed to them.
