Corrections

A story on Page 5A of the July 21 issue of The Oberlin Herald about burning debris was cut off in the last paragraph. It should have read: "In the meantime, (City Attorney Steve Hirsch) said, he would check the city ordinances to see if this sort of burning is legal under the city code. However, he noted it would take him a little while to look things up."
A photo caption on the same story had a word at the end omitted. It should have said: "Watching the flames die down on the remains of two abandoned houses on Thursday, Roger Wilson (left) and his son Dave were preparing to clean up the property which Roger owns across Maple Street from the county ball fields."
This was a makeup and proof-reading error.
