Colleges plan to collaborate

Board members from Colby Community College and the Northwest Kansas Technical College in Goodland met recently to talk about working together to help students at both.

Colby board members Cindy Black, Kenton Krehbiel, Arlen Leiker and Dale Herschberger drove to Goodland on June 1 for the dinner meeting. Board members Clair Legere, Billi Beckman, Paul Bruggeman, Frank Otter, Rob Loftin, Arlie Archer, Bruce Buck and Dick Short represented the technical college.

The boards discussed three potential areas of collaboration, including programs of study, student life and recruitment.

Partnerships and collaborations with other colleges provide more opportunities for all our students," said Mrs. Black, chairman of the Colby board. "Working together will reduce barriers and contribute to the economic growth and stability of northwest Kansas."

Collaborative efforts such as this will allow our schools to emerge stronger with the potential to increase enrollments, programs and cooperation between the two colleges," said Mr. Loftin.

As record numbers of students are enrolling at higher education institutions, community colleges and technical colleges are struggling with shrinking resources. Money from the state has been reduced, with the seen of even more cut next year. In addition, the population in northwest Kansas has experienced dramatic declines.
