Grill portions ahead

You can enjoy grilled chicken, sirloin steak and fish for lunch for weeks even though you haven't taken the cover off the grill. How do you do it? Grill extra when you have the marinade prepared and the grill heated. When everything is cooked make 2 ounce portions, just enough to top a salad. Then, before work, prepare your lunch by putting greens and whatever raw vegetables you have in the vegetable drawer - carrots, broccoli, onion, mushrooms, cucumber - in a plastic container, add one of your meat/fish packets and a piece of fruit to your lunch bag and you are good to go. When lunch time comes, finish defrosting the meat/fish packet, slice it up and top your salad. Yum.

The keys to this whole process are 1) working quickly so your food doesn't sit out at room temperature for too long and 2) getting a tight seal. Meat frozen incorrectly will suffer freezer burn in a few weeks. This means that air dries the meat and causes loss of flavor.

Pack foods in quantities that will be used for a single meal. You may use foil because you will have very small amounts. If you are freezing several portions, plastic freezer bags (not plastic storage bags, they are different) or commercial freezer paper may work better. When packing several cuts in one package, put two layers of freezer paper between the pieces. This makes it easy to separate pieces for fast thawing.

When using plastic bags, take care to get all the air out of the bag before you seal it. Press air from the bag by beginning at the bottom of the bag and moving toward the unfilled top part of the bag to prevent air from re-entering. Or you can use a clean straw inserted in the bag and inhale to remove the air before quickly closing the bag.

After your food is wrapped, label it with the date and contents. This helps you remember which foods need to be eaten first and what is in each package.

The last step is to store your food in a location in the freezer where you can easily grab it when you are making your lunch. Give it a try! If you have questions, please feel free to contact your local K-State Research and Extension Office or email TrandaWatts at twwatts@ksu.edu.

The Triumphant Trinity by Father Mark Berland Oberlin Sacred Heart Catholic Church

The Triumphant Trinity "that the world might be saved through Him"

God is not an abstract idea far removed from our lives. God is the loving, kind, merciful, inspiring, living Presence in whom we live, who lives in us. Within us, while we sleep and waking, God is gracing us in Christ with the Holy Spirit. God lives and loves in you, your spouse, your children, friends neighbors, and your enemy. The divine mystery breaks through in the beauty of a sunrise or the terror of a storm. God suffers in the war-weary and those hurt by hate. Even when we refuse that divine life and love, God never gives up on us.

"God so loved the world" might be the only message we need to believe with all our hearts in order to be saved.

Pure and simple, we are saved through love. Well, maybe it is not so simple; love is costly. It costs our entire self, given freely. "God so love the world that He gave His only Son." In giving His only Son, He is giving a part of Himself.

Is that not what we do when we love? We give a piece of ourselves. And does not true love always save in some way? An image of the trinity is a vision of the three divine persons sitting around inside each other in loving communion. This may not be theologically correct, because to understand the triune God would mean we are God.

The Holy Spirit is always on the move looking for ways to draw us through the risen Christ into the life of God, our source of life and our end. God, who loves us never tires of giving; as the Son so that we "who believe in Him might not perish, but might have eternal life" (John 3:16).

We need to deepen our "YES" AMEN, to this loving presence and action of God in our lives, our community, our world through Christ and the Holy Spirit. Let us cry out to our world, "Allow God to save us. Allow God to love us."
