Help celebrate heart month

In 2002, research revealed a serious misconception among American women "that heart disease was a man's disease".

Awareness of heart disease as the No. 1 killer of women has nearly doubled recently. Recent research shows that more women are seeking information about their personal risk for heart disease and taking actions to reduce it, such as by increasing physical activity.

Here are ways to celebrate heart health throughout American Heart Month this February. 1. Wear red on National Wear Red Day (or any other day). Put on a favorite red dress, shirt, tie or Red Dress pin, and spread the critical message that "Heart Disease Doesn't Care What You Wear ." It's the No. 1 Killer of Women.

2. Talk to your doctor about your heart health. Your doctor can be an important partner in helping you set and reach goals for heart health. Don't wait for your doctor to mention heart disease or its risk factors. Speak up, ask questions, and if you don't understand something your doctor says, ask for an explanation in simple language. Review a list of questions to ask your doctor at: nhlbi.nih.gov/educational/hearttruth/lower-risk/ask-doctor.htm

3. Share these statistics with your family and friends:

• One in 4 women in the U.S. dies of heart disease, while 1 in 30 dies of breast cancer. • Coronary Heart Disease is the

No. 1 killer of both men and women

• In 2009, 50 percent of women aged 25 to 34 years were aware of heart disease as their No. 1 killer, up from just 16 percent in 1997.

• By leading a healthy lifestyle, you can reduce your risk of heart disease by up to 82 percent. 4. Learn about heart attack warning signs in a new video, and listen to Maria as she shares her personal heart attack experience. To watch, visit nhlbi.nih.gov/educational/ hearttruth/index. 5. Learn about coronary heart disease risk factors. Certain traits, conditions, or habits, known as risk factors, may raise your risk.

The more risk factors you have, the higher your risk is to develop disease. Eighty percent of women aged 40 to 60 have one or more risk factors for heart disease. Having just one risk factor doubles your chance of developing heart disease! 6. Learn how your heart works.

Your heart is vital to your health and nearly everything that goes on in your body. It's located under your ribcage in the center of your chest between your right and left lungs. Anormal, healthy, adult heart usually is the size of an average clenched adult fist. Find out what's behind the "lub-dub" sound View an animation to see how your heart pumps blood, at: nhlbi.nih.gov/ health/health-topics/topics/hhw/

7. Share stories from the heart. Heart disease affects women in every community in the U.S. and may affect you. It can alter or damage your life, or even take it away. If you have heart disease, you are not alone. Explore stories that women have shared about how heart disease has changed their lives and outlooks by visiting nhlbi.nih. gov/educational/hearttruth/about/living during the rule of Emperor Claudius in AD 270. Church tradition has it that on the day of his execution, for the Christian faith, St. Valentine left a note of encouragement for the child of his jailer. It was written on red paper torn in the form of a heart. It was an expression of encouragement and compassion.

8. Spread the word: Teach others about heart disease.

There is a movie production available through the Lutheran Laymen's League, entitled, "St. Valentine". In that movie, the jailer's child is his daughter. In that movie, the jailer's daughter is blind, and has grown close to St. Valentine because of his kindness. The this. God's love and His gifts of love are totally

When any Christian dies, a proclamation is made to the world and the universe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God and the Resurrection and the Life. This is what a Christian funeral is all about.

In our fallen and broken world, when the concept of "love' is considered, we think of it in earthly terms. We think of "love" in terms of bartering. If you do this for me, then I will do this for you. God's love however is not like young girl questions why St. Valentine would and entirely free, without cost. One cannot buy
