

IN THE LOBBY during the KFNF Home Show on Saturday, Alana Raile (above left) and Kaitlyn Howland sold Girl Scout cookies.

Robert Groneweg (below) displayed many of the items he sells in his store on Main Street, R&M Service Center.

Oberlin home show draws in 250 people

Roofers, contractors, store owners and owners of home businesses talked about their products during the annual KFNF Home Show on Saturday at The Gateway.

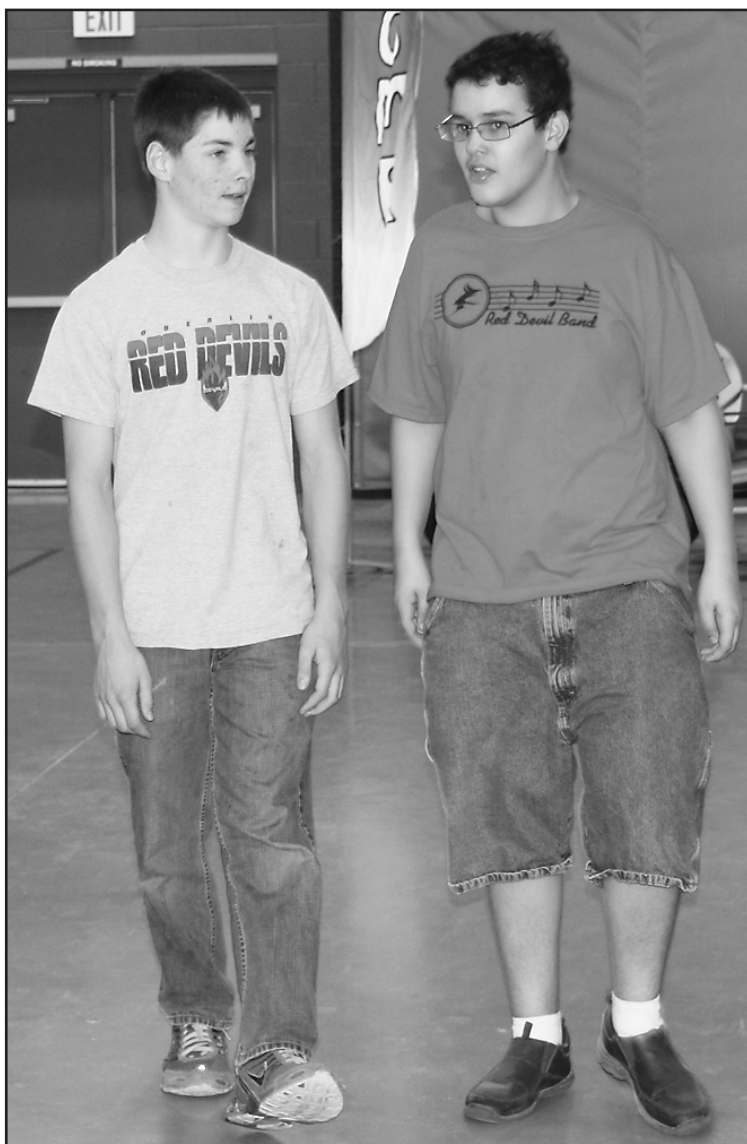

With temperatures up in the high 80s, the number of attendees was down a little, said Bryan Loker, general manager for High Plains Radio Group, which owns the Oberlin station. The Decatur Area Chamber of Commerce put on the show for years, then KFNF took it over. This is the fifth year for the radio station to sponsor the free show at The Gateway, he said.

Mr. Loker said 250 people walked through the show, down about 100 from the previous year.

Several of the vendors had good comments, he added, with saying they sold some merchandise. Of course, he added, there are also some complaints.

Mr. Loker said the station will probably hold the home show again next year. The group puts on a show in Holyoke, Colo., on the same Saturday, he said. It had a good turnout, too, about 400 people.

AT THE GATEWAY on Saturday, Cade Wurm (left) and Adrian Chambers walked around the KFNF Home Show, checking out the booths.

— Story and photos by Kimberly Davis