OBERLIN SCHOOLS

Superintendent Duane Dorshorst is celebrating his 30th year working in the Oberlin School District. Mr. Dorshorst, a longtime teacher and principal, has been superintendent since 2009. He came here first as a science teacher and was promoted to elementary principal in 1996. Then, in 2009, he was named superintendent, replacing Dr. Patrick Cullen. He still supervises the elementary school as well.

OBERLIN WELL SERVICE

Anthony Zillinger purchased Kelley Well Drilling from Dick and Donna Kelley on Jan. 1, 2011, and has changed the name to Oberlin Well Service. The business is at 303 W. Frontier Parkway in Oberlin.

The Zillinger family moved from Paonia, Colo., to Oberlin in 1997, when he started working for Mr. Kelley. He and his wife Jennifer have three children. Adam is a junior at Decatur Community High School; A.J. is a seventh grader and Jennavive a fourth grader. The family bought a home southeast of Oberlin.

Mr. Zillinger said that his wife's aunt, Janet Rarich, moved to Oberlin several years ago and when she visited here, she fell in love with the town. He had an auto repair shop in Paonia, but they decided to move partly because many of his relatives live in the Logan area and he always enjoyed spending time there.

He said the firm services all types of water wells, including irrigation and windmills, 24 hours a day. Mr. Kelley still works part-time doing well drilling. Mr. Zillinger's son Adam and Keaston Grafel also assist him.

The couple moved to Oberlin from Fort Morgan, Colo., in April 2009, and she has worked at Twice Sold Treasures in Norton. She said she had a similar business in Fort Morgan. Mr. Swank, a retired federal employee, worked for the Department of Defense in several locations, including Germany and Baltimore.

"We are excited about our new business and hope to help women, especially those who are looking for casual and career-oriented clothing," she said.
